

At the end of each lesson look at the thinking processes below and place an X in the box next to the process that you think you used. In the gray boxes to the right, write a description of what the lesson covered.	Introduction to lesson
Observe: Use one or more of the five senses to gather information.	X
Classify/Sequence: Group or put objects in order.
Communicate: Give information by talking or writing.	X
Estimate/Measure: Compare and then measure objects.
Predict: What do you think will happen?
Develop Questions: What questions do you have based on what you have learned or would like to know?	X
Hypothesize: Make a guess about what might happen based on what you already know and have experienced.
Infer: Developing ideas based on what you know from past experiences.
Record/Organize Data: Collect, document, and organize information.	X
Design Models: Create a how-to for designing a model, including the materials needed as well as the steps of how to create it.
Construct Models: Create a copy of something real using clay, crayons, pencils or other materials.
Interpret Data: Explain the information presented in a table, graph, and/or diagram.																	